“We’re Not Afraid to Die...
if we Can All Be Together”

In July 1976, my wife Mary, son Jonathan, 6, daughter Suzanne, 7, and I set sail from Plymouth, England, to ^{repeat}duplicate the round the-world ^{travel}voyage made 200 years earlier by Captain James Cook.

For the longest time, Mary and I — a 37-year-old businessman — had dreamt of sailing in the wake of the famous explorer, and for the past 16 years we had spent all our ^{free}leisure time ^{improving}honing our seafaring skills in British waters. → Water bodies set sail: to begin a journey by sea duplicate: repeat

in the wake of: following honing: improving

“We’re Not Afraid to Die...
if we Can All Be Together”

Our boat ^{name of the boat} Wavewalker, a 23 metre, 30 ton wooden-hulled beauty, had been professionally built, and we had spent months fitting it out and testing it in the roughest weather we could find.

wooden-hulled: outer body of the ship made of wood

part of the journey.

The first leg of our planned three-year, (105,000) kilometre journey passed pleasantly as we sailed down the west coast of Africa to Cape Town. There, before heading east, we took on two crewmen – American Larry Vigil and Swiss Herb Seigler – to help us tackle one of the world's roughest seas, the southern Indian Ocean.

leg: one part of a journey crewmen: men to work on the ship

On our second day out of Cape Town, we began to encounter ^{Strong winds} strong gales. For the next few weeks, they blew continuously.

Gales did not worry me; but the size of the waves was alarming — up to 15 metres, as high as our main mast.

gales: strong winds
mast: a tall upright poll

December 25 found us 3,500 kilometres east of Cape Town. Despite atrocious weather, we had a wonderful holiday complete with a Christmas tree. New Year’s Day saw no improvement in the weather, but we reasoned that it had to change soon. And it did change — for the worse.

atrocious: extremely bad

“We’re Not Afraid to Die... if we Can All Be Together”

At dawn on January 2, the waves were gigantic. We were sailing with only a small storm jib and were still making eight knots. As the ship rose to the top of each wave we could see endless enormous seas rolling towards us, and the screaming of the wind and spray was painful to the ears. To slow the boat down, we dropped the storm jib and lashed a heavy mooring rope in a loop across the stern. Then we double-lashed everything, went through our life-raft drill, attached lifelines, donned oilskins and life jackets — and waited.

stern: back part of the ship life-raft drill: practicing how to climb into a life Boat if the main Boat sinks.

donned: wear

“We’re Not Afraid to Die... if we Can All Be Together”

The first indication of impending disaster came at about 6 p.m., with an ominous silence. The wind dropped, and the sky immediately grew dark. Then came a growing roar, and an enormous cloud towered aft of the ship. With horror, I realised that it was not a cloud, but a wave like no other I had ever seen. It appeared perfectly vertical (straight) and almost twice the height of the other waves, with a frightful breaking crest.

impending: about to happen

ominous: threatening

aft of the ship: near or toward the stern of a ship breaking crest: where the top of a wave collapses and the wave breaks

“We’re Not Afraid to Die...
if we Can All Be Together”

The roar increased to a thunder as the stern moved up the face of the wave, and for a moment I thought we might ride over it. But then a tremendous explosion shook the deck. A torrent of green and white water broke over the ship, my head smashed into the wheel and I was aware of flying overboard and sinking below the waves. I accepted my approaching death, and as I was losing consciousness, I felt quite peaceful.

deck: floor of the ship torrent: large amount

“We’re Not Afraid to Die... if we Can All Be Together”

Unexpectedly, my head popped out of the water. A few metres away, Wavewalker was near capsizing, her masts almost horizontal. Then a wave hurled her upright, my lifeline jerked taut, I grabbed the guard rails and sailed through the air into Wavewalker’s main boom. Subsequent waves tossed me around the deck like a rag doll. My left ribs cracked; my mouth filled with blood and broken teeth. Somehow, I found the wheel, lined up the stern for the next wave and hung on.

capsizing: overturn

hurled: to throw something with great force

taut: pulled tightly

Subsequent: coming after or later tossed: up down

hung on: held the boat tightly

“We’re Not Afraid to Die...
if we Can All Be Together”

Water, Water, Everywhere. I could feel that the ship had water below, but I dared not abandon the wheel to investigate. Suddenly, the front ^{door} hatch was thrown open and Mary appeared. “We’re sinking!” she screamed. “The decks are smashed; we’re full of water.”

“Take the wheel”, I shouted as I scrambled for the hatch.

hatch: door

scrambled: to move somewhere quickly
