

We're Not Afraid to Die... if We Can All Be Together

Q1. Describe the mental condition of the voyagers on 4 and 5 January.

Answer: On January 4 and 5, the voyagers were in a very bad state as the weather worsened. After pumping water for 36 hours non-stop, they were completely drained — both physically and mentally. Fear of dying filled their minds. They believed that their only hope was to find one of the two islands nearby, as the severely damaged boat could no longer take them to Australia.

Q2. Why do you think people undertake such adventurous expeditions in spite of the risks involved?

Answer: People are naturally curious and driven by the desire for thrill and adventure. This adventurous spirit pushes them to take on risky journeys. Great explorers like Vasco da Gama, Columbus, Peary, Amundsen, Hillary, and Tenzing showed this spirit by exploring the unknown. Thanks to such people, we have gained a lot of knowledge and progress. They dreamed big and achieved the impossible.

Q3. What lessons do we learn from such hazardous experiences when we are face-to-face with death?

Answer: Stories of people who face extreme danger with courage inspire us to stay strong during tough times. As the saying goes, "Cowards die many times before their death; the brave die only once."

These experiences teach us not to panic and to stay calm in difficulties. Staying hopeful and positive helps us face challenges better. With a brave attitude, even big problems start to fade away.

Q4. How does the story suggest that optimism helps to endure "the direst stress"?

Answer: The story encourages us to stay hopeful during tough times. The people on the boat 'Wavewalker' never gave up, even when they were close to death. Their strong will and positive mindset helped them reach safety at Ile Amsterdam. The story shows that if we remain optimistic and don't lose hope, we can survive even the worst situations. Optimism gives us strength to face hardships.

Q5. What difference did you notice between the reaction of the adults and the children when faced with danger

Answer: Both adults and children on the boat faced a life-threatening situation. While the adults worked hard to save the boat and survive, the children showed surprising bravery. Sue, the young girl, did not mention her injuries because she didn't want to add to her father's stress. She even made a sweet card to cheer her parents up. The boy showed maturity by saying he wasn't scared of dying as long as they were together. Their calmness and love gave strength to the adults.
