Birth A.J. Cronin

- Andrew was returning from a date with his girlfriend when he found Joe Morgan waiting for him outside his house. It was nearly midnight and Joe's wife was about to give birth. Andrew snapped out of his heavy and dark thoughts, took his bag, and walked with Joe to his house. Upon reaching, Joe informed Andrew that he would not go inside the house. Andrew could see that Joe was very much under strain.

⇒ Joe Morgan

⇒ Suzan Morgan.

Birth A.J. Cronin

- As Andrew approaches his house, he finds Joe Morgan, a middle-aged man, anxiously waiting for him. Joe tells Andrew that his wife is in labor and needs medical attention immediately. The Morgans have been married for 20 years and are finally expecting their first child, making the occasion emotionally significant.

Birth A.J. Cronin

- Andrew quickly gathers his medical bag and accompanies Joe to his house. The Morgan home is small and modest, reflecting the couple's humble background. Andrew is welcomed by anxious family members. He is led to the bedroom upstairs where Mrs. Susan Morgan is in labor, being looked after by an experienced midwife.

Birth A.J. Cronin

- Andrew examines the patient and realizes the delivery will take time. He prepares himself to wait, taking a seat in the kitchen. Hours pass slowly as Andrew sits silently, immersed in thought, feeling mentally and physically drained. The atmosphere in the house is tense, with everyone silently hoping for a safe delivery.

Birth A.J. Cronin

- After waiting for a long time, the delivery process begins. Susan endures immense pain. Finally, a baby boy is born. However, to everyone's horror, the newborn shows no signs of life—he is limp, pale, and not breathing. Simultaneously, Susan's condition becomes critical, and she begins to slip into unconsciousness.

Birth A.J. Cronin

- Andrew is struck with a sudden sense of panic and urgency. He must make a life-or-death decision: whom to save first—the mother or the newborn. Acting quickly and decisively, Andrew injects Susan with a life-saving drug and administers oxygen. He manages to stabilize her condition after a tense few minutes.

Birth A.J. Cronin

- With Susan now safe, Andrew turns his full attention to the baby. The midwife had already placed the seemingly dead infant under the bed, assuming it could not be saved. However, Andrew refuses to give up. He retrieves the baby and begins attempting to revive it using artificial respiration.

Birth A.J. Cronin

- Andrew works tirelessly on the child. He uses the “Labile method” of artificial respiration, and alternately dips the infant into hot and cold water. He also vigorously rubs the baby’s chest to stimulate breathing. Despite several attempts, the baby remains unresponsive. Andrew is drenched in sweat, his heart pounding, but he continues.

Birth A.J. Cronin

- Just when Andrew is about to lose all hope, a miracle happens—the baby begins to gasp and then cries out. The cry breaks the silence and brings a wave of relief and joy. The lifeless baby has come back to life, thanks to Andrew's determination, skill, and refusal to surrender.

Birth A.J. Cronin

- Andrew is overwhelmed with joy and emotional release. He hands the healthy, crying baby to the midwife and leaves the room quietly. He doesn't wait for thanks or appreciation. What he has experienced has changed him deeply. He now understands the true meaning and purpose of being a doctor.

Birth A.J. Cronin

- As Andrew walks out of the Morgan house into the early morning calm, he is filled with deep satisfaction. Though he is physically exhausted, he feels a sense of pride and fulfillment unlike anything before. In his mind, he reflects: “I have done something real — something worthwhile.”

QUESTION

"I have done something; oh, God! I've done something real at last." Why does Andrew say this? What does it mean?

Answer:

Andrew spoke these words in the ecstasy of saving both the mother's and the child's lives. Andrew was depressed before the operation because of the pain his girlfriend had caused him. When he successfully delivered the baby, he discovered that the baby had died. Then he decided to first cure the mother, which he did. Following that, he carefully observed the baby and determined the problem. He then immediately administered the necessary treatment and resuscitated the baby. As a result, he successfully did something meaningful. Till that point, he was just thinking and then he did something real.

QUESTION

There lies a great difference between textbook medicine and the world of a practising physician. Discuss.

Answer:

The world of practicing physicians and textbook medicine is vastly different. Textbook medicine is purely scientific, whereas patient care is an art. The world of practising physicians necessitates a unique set of abilities and knowledge. Although textbook medicine provides a conceptual framework for treatment, no doctor can treat a patient without employing intuitive practices. The way Andrew brings a stillborn child back to life in the story Birth attests to this fact. The nurse initially dumps the child, believing it to be dead. Andrews, on the other hand, takes a chance, and the miracle occurs. He initially applies textbook knowledge, but the child does not recover. He never gives up hope. He uses his intuitive method, and the miracle occurs. Treatment is based on science and goes beyond. It is a science as well as an art form. Birth is a work of realistic fiction. In other words, the story's elements have been drawn from real-life experiences and woven into the fabric of fiction.
